CANADIAN ACADEMY OF ARCHITECTURE FOR JUSTICE
ACADÉMIE D'ARCHITECTURE DE JUSTICE CANADIENNE

The Canadian Academy of Architecture for Justice (CAAJ) is a recently-formed organization with the mission of promoting and encouraging excellence in the design of justice facilities in Canada. Justice architecture includes courthouses, correctional, law enforcement facilities and public safety facilities. We are interested in showcasing the state of justice architecture in Canada today.

To this end we are inviting Canadian architectural firms to submit noteworthy justice projects for inclusion in a digital survey of the present state of justice architecture in Canada, including international work produced in Canada. This survey will be presented at an event the CAAJ is planning on hosting during the upcoming RAIC/OAA conference taking place in Ottawa this May, as well as on a future web site.

Interested firms are asked to submit one or two images of each relevant justice architecture project, including name and location of the project, full architectural authorship credit, as well as photographic credits.

Submission Date: Sunday April 30, 2017

Please forward submissions to the CAAJ care of Geraldine.Robson@norr.com by April 30 2017 to ensure inclusion.

By submitting photos it is assumed that you have the copyright and that you are giving us permission to use the images as described above.
